

REORGANIZATION BILL PERILOUSLY NEAR DEFEAT

House Democratic Leaders
Seek To Repair Their Shattered Lines

REFUSE TO QUIT DEBATE

Plan to Force Passage by Tonight Appears To Be Completely Disrupted

By William S. Neal

(L. N. S. Staff Correspondent)

WASHINGTON, April 2—(INS)—The Administration's reorganization bill hovered perilously near defeat today as House Democratic leaders sought to repair their shattered lines to resist new onslaughts.

Emboldened by their victory last night when the House, by a vote of 191 to 149, refused to summarily close debate, foes of the bill considered forcing a new test vote today.

The well-laid plan of administration leaders to invoke the usually well-oiled Democratic machine to force passage by tonight appeared to have been completely disrupted. Unless the bill is killed by a quick thrust, the fight is expected to continue next week.

As a result of the bi-partisan uprising, which upset all calculations of House leaders, the way was opened for almost unlimited debate and filibustering tactics.

Administration leaders and foes of the bill differed in their view of the effect of the House revolt. Speaker Bankhead said:

"The House thought we ought to have more debate. We are going to pass the bill—it may be amended some—but we are going to pass it."

Chairman O'Connor (D.), New York, of the rules committee, leader of the opposition, said:

"The significance is that the fight is over. The bill may not be considered any more. The American people, in my opinion, have won a victory."

Morrisville Rotary Entertains The Police

MORRISVILLE, April 2—Speaking on "Highway Safety" at the dinner meeting of the local Rotary Club, Thursday night, at Leghorn Farms, Sergeant R. D. Engle, of the Pennsylvania Motor Police, urged motorists to use the simple common sense rules of the road as a means of helping reduce the death and accident rate.

The speaker told of the work which the State is doing to reduce the accidents and he asked co-operation from not only the automobile drivers but the pedestrians as well.

During the meeting, birthday greetings were extended to Wilmer Anderson and Martin Flock.

Officer Investigates Two Automobile Accidents

Two motor accidents occurred during the early morning hours along Bristol Pike, west of here.

At Edgington, Howard Gernet, Bristol R. D. 2, was injured when his car struck a pole at three o'clock. Gernet was treated at Harriman Hospital for fractured ribs, lacerations and contusions of the forehead requiring two stitches, contused wound of the left hand in which three stitches were taken, and wound of the knee requiring one stitch.

Patrolman Wenzel, of Oxford Valley barracks, investigated the accident, and is also investigating one near Edgington in which an automobile was found badly smashed. The car was ordered towed to a garage, and the officer is conducting an investigation to learn the occupants of the machine, and circumstances surrounding the crash.

JAMES CHALLENGES PINCHOT TO SHOW RECORD

Superior Court Judge Welcomes Forester's Plan to Review His Record

A S S A I L S D E M O C R A T S

GREENSBURG, Apr. 2—In another fiery attack upon Pinchot, Superior Court Judge Arthur H. James, last night, challenged his rival for the Republican gubernatorial nomination to disclose to the public the platform upon which he seeks a third term as Governor of Pennsylvania.

"What about his platform?" the jurist asked at a large rally of Westmoreland county Republicans held at this community's central fire station.

"Has he run out of other things to talk about—constructive things—that he welcomes a chance for personalities?"

Referring to Pinchot's radio statement that he would read his opponent's public record, Judge James declared he was "proud of that record, and pleased to have him join the ranks of those who are helping me call it to your attention."

"Are these 'crocodile tears' which he is shedding over being thus forced to read my record?" the jurist asked.

Although Judge James declared he would fight Pinchot with all his might, but fairly, he added he would support the former Governor if he wins the nomination.

"This is not a pink tea party," the jurist asserted. "When we are out to get an office we have a right to go after it with all our means as long as we do it fairly."

"I've got a right to do it, and so has my opponent. If I win he should be for me. I know, if he wins, I'll be for him."

Discussing his tilt with Pinchot, the jurist added, "there is no harm in a political contest," but he asserted it was strange that the former Governor is now shouting harmony and doesn't want to engage in a battle of words.

"It's the first time he isn't anxious for a fight," Judge James said. "It's a strange and sinister thing. It should put you people on your guard. When he talks about harmony it's like the lamb when he found that the lion ate him up."

"The Republican Party will be benefited and blessed by a complete airing of this situation. Then we will know what we must contend with in the fall."

He assailed Pinchot for not seeking the U. S. Senate nomination which was virtually offered to him without opposition, "especially when it has been the coveted ambition of his life to live in Washington."

"Now," the jurist added, "when the ideas of harmony in that section coincide with his, he disdains the chance afforded him."

"They say with him, well, just ask yourself to look at his record and analyze it."

He took issue with Pinchot's contention that he was the master road builder in the history of the State, asserting that former Governor Fisher, who preceded Pinchot's second administration, built some of the finest highways.

"Just compare the roads built during Governor Fisher's administration to those constructed during Pinchot's second term," he added.

He promised that if elected he would "give the contractors a jolt; there will be no more cost-plus contracts, or force accounts system, as it is now called."

"We will have honest contracts and honest expenditures of funds," he pledged. "Further, there will be no politics in the game and fish commissions."

At the same time, Judge James, who came here from Pittsburgh, assailed the Democratic organization for "compelling unemployed to join the ranks of their party before being placed on public works projects."

Further, he charged that the permanency of the jobs, during the current campaign, depended upon which of the warring Democratic factions the WPA worker supports.

This situation was particularly true, the jurist asserted, in Westmoreland county, where thousands have been placed on the unemployment lists by

Judge James Aims To Check Flight of Industry

(Evening Public Ledger, March 31, 1938)

There is perfect accord between Governor Earle and Superior Court Judge James on one thing. Both agree that industry is being forced out of Pennsylvania. The point of disagreement is as to the cause.

Governor Earle is approaching the end of a term which began in 1936. He is a candidate for United States Senator. Judge James is striving for the nomination as Republican candidate to contest for the Governorship. Consequently anything that either of them says on this vital question is of foremost importance to this State's vast industrial interests.

The subject of migration of industry has been one of the main sources of worry to the Democratic Party in Pennsylvania. That was evident when the New Deal Legislature appointed a commission to study the subject.

This group, known as the Dent Industrial Tax Study Commission, will begin its final hearings in Philadelphia one week from tomorrow. At that time it will be told about the concerns that have closed their factories here and opened new ones elsewhere. It also will learn about the manufacturers who have refused to locate in or near this city because of excessive taxation and oppressive labor legislation fostered by the Democrats in control at Harrisburg.

Governor Earle's admission that Pennsylvania manufacturers are unable longer to compete with those in other States was made at a press conference. He took the stand that:

Any question of industries leaving the State has nothing to do with taxes—the whole thing is the lower wage scales paid in the South. It's hard to compete with people who work for half as much and for twice as long.

In this connection it may be recalled that Governor Earle has had the factory inspectors under his Department of Labor and Industry making an investigation of this subject for months. No results of their inquiry have ever been announced, but it is only fair to assume that the Governor has obtained from them first-hand knowledge that industry is moving over the borders of Pennsylvania to more friendly States. Naturally, he would not blame it upon taxes which he proposed.

Judge James, in a speech at New Castle, not only called attention to the fact that there is a steady exodus of industry from this Commonwealth but placed the blame squarely upon the taxation and legislative policies of the Democrats. He told his audience that New Deal taxes and labor legislation have caused:

A steady exodus of factories from this State.

A serious letdown in business activity on the part of those concerns which have remained here.

A great increase in unemployment.

The Judge pointed out that in the nearly four years of the Earle Administration $286,000,000 in new taxes have been

PLAYWRIGHT GETS LICENSE TO PHOTOGRAPH BUCKS IN BUCKS COUNTY TO WED FARM LAND FROM AIR

Jack Kirkland, Haila Stoddard
Reported To Be Planning
Wedding This Week-End

PEACE JUSTICE IS "MUM"

DOYLESTOWN, April 2—In spite of the fact that news service dispatches from Montreal, dated March 29th, carried a story of the secret marriage last Sunday of Haila Stoddard, 24-year-old ingenue of the comedy hit, "Yes, My Darling Daughter," to Jack Kirkland, 36-year-old playwright, the marriage has evidently not taken place, but is scheduled for either today or Sunday.

It was learned yesterday that Kirkland, accompanied by a friend, came to the office of the Clerk of Orphans' Court in the Bucks county court house, here, and obtained a marriage license to wed Haila Stoddard. The application was dated April 2 and signed by Justice of the Peace Levi D. Stever, of Springtown, Bucks county. Under the Pennsylvania law the license cannot be used for three days.

Justice Stever would not state when the marriage is to be performed or any details concerning the application, but the record on the marriage license docket here shows the following:

Application made by John M. Kirkland, 36, of Springtown, Bucks County, Pa., a native of St. Louis. Divorced three times, July, 1931; February 6, 1936; and April, 1937. He is the son of William Thomas Kirkland.

Haila Stoddard, 24, a bride-to-be, of 57 West 45th street, New York City, an actress, was born in Great Falls, Montana, the daughter of George A. Stoddard, of Los Angeles, Calif., a manufacturer. She was divorced in June, 1936.

The Quakertown Free Press, Quakertown, yesterday published the Montreal story and on the end was a paragraph which quoted Justice of the Peace Stever as saying that he knew nothing of the wedding of last Sunday. Other close friends of Kirkland at his home refused to comment.

In the meantime the marriage license application was discovered on the official record books in the Orphans' Court office here, and publication

Vatican Retracts Criticism

Vatican City, Apr. 2—Taking a step unprecedented in the history of the Holy See, the Vatican today formally retracted a criticism of Nazi Germany voiced over the radio last night from the Vatican station.

Coincident to this unexpected development, it was heard in wholly reliable quarters that secret negotiations are under way between Berlin and the Holy See.

If this is so, the Vatican's retraction is understandable on the grounds that criticisms such as that made last night would be certain to handicap negotiations.

STOP CHOKING IT

An Associated Press dispatch from Washington declares that Federal finance officials, acting under President Roosevelt's orders, are searching for some means of "pumping a credit stimulus into the veins of lagging business." To further that search, a committee is to be set up at once to make the required study.

The President must know, though he does not admit it, that the outstanding need of lagging business is not so much credit as it is confidence. He must further know that business lags because it is fearful of what government may do under the direction of Mr. Roosevelt.

The President himself can supply business with the stimulant needed if he will. He need only to withdraw his antagonism to free enterprise, to take off the brakes of impending taxation, to remove the threat of government competition. That done, there will be no necessity of "pumping a credit stimulus" into the veins of business.

More specifically, Mr. Roosevelt's committee is to explore "the possibilities of providing government aid in the form of loans to business, both large and small." If the Administration is to turn to lending to business, in an effort to stem the tide of the Roosevelt recession, the governmental machinery still is available for that purpose. And the machinery in question is a legacy from the Hoover Administration—the RFC.

It will be recalled that the RFC was one of Mr. Roosevelt's favorite targets when, as Governor of New York and as Presidential candidate, he was doing everything in his power to impair public confidence in the Federal government and to play on a crowd psychology of panic and fear.

When his personal and political ambition has been gratified and he, himself, was in the White House, he suddenly discovered that all we had to fear was fear—and that everyone must trust the Federal government. And then the much-labeled RFC was called on to save some of Mr. Roosevelt's experiments from their selves—and made a good job of it. Perhaps, under the hard-headed Jesse Jones, it again can make a good job of meeting some of the problems of Mr. Roosevelt's new depression—or recession.

But we still feel that the greatest need of business is to have the hand of Mr. Roosevelt's New Dealer taken from its throat.

If no world is left when New York opens her World's Fair, the name should be preserved, for the sake of auld lang syne.

Maybe you had better stay over there, Mr. Hoover. One never knows, and brave little Belgium may have to be relieved all over again!

the "mistakes of the Democratic regime at Harrisburg."

"The overburden of taxes on industry and the flood of legal red tape have crippled most of your mills and your mines and your railroading," he continued. "As a result of this, the great farming industry in your county has suffered."

"It is sad to think of the unfortunate victims of this mistaken policy, who are so numerous in Westernland county—the wives and children of those who should be holding good jobs and can now consider themselves fortunate if they have relief or WPA checks coming in to keep them alive."

"One of the saddest parts of this picture is that this form of more existence means not only that they must belong officially to the Democratic Party, but it also appears that these jobs depend upon which faction of the Democratic Party they belong to."

"Our great hope for the future lay in these men and women, who see their suffering capitalized for political ends, will avail themselves of the privacy of the voting booths to exercise their sacred right and duty to put a sprig in the Democratic machine."

Judge James made two public appearances in addition to his address last night during his visit to Westmoreland county, heretofore classed as Pinchot territory.

He first stopped at Latrobe, an industrial center with 10,000 population, and then went to Vandergrift, a steel town.

Shortly after midnight the jurist en-trained for Philadelphia.

Playwright Gets License In Bucks County To Wed

tion of the application was supposed to be kept a secret until after Sunday, April 3.

"We didn't intend it to be a secret, but we didn't tell anyone about it," Jatta Stoddard was quoted as saying in the recent news dispatch. "We just slipped away and got married." She is quoted as saying. She also stated that they would postpone their honeymoon five weeks until the play closed in Montreal.

Whether she will fly back to Bucks county from Montreal over the week-end, could not be learned. Whether Kirkland is at his Bucks county home was another thing that could not be learned last night. He attended the opening performance of his new play at His Majesty's Theatre, Montreal, on March 28th.

Kirkland's first wife was Nancy Carroll, red-haired film star, whom he married in 1924. Seven years later they were divorced. They have a daughter, Patricia.

The playwright, who adapted "Tobacco Road," from Erskine Caldwell's novel, married Jayne Shaddock, blonde movie ingenue, in March, 1934. At the end of an eight weeks' honeymoon they separated and were divorced a short time later.

In December, 1936, Kirkland married Julia Laird, actress, at Harrison, N. Y. Three months later, Miss Laird obtained a Reno divorce.

Early this year Kirkland engaged in a one-round battle with Richard Watts, Jr., dramatic critic for the New York Herald-Tribune, over Watts' criticism of Kirkland's adaptation of John Steinbeck's novel, "Tortilla Flat," which ran one week on Broadway.

FASHION PARADE

By Orry-Kelly

(Famous Hollywood Stylist Writing For International News Service)
HOLLYWOOD—(INS)—Degraded leather which resembles the softest doeskin has suddenly become one of the most important media in Hollywood fashions. There's hardly a girl in town who doesn't have a collection of these soul-satisfying degraded leather blouses, boleros, jackets and beanies. An outgrowth of the tremendous vogue for suede this lightweight skin has the advantage of being easily dry-cleaned and more easily dyed. It, strangely enough, takes its dye in such a way that any combination of colors seems to harmonize.

As a fresh color harmony there is June Travis' use of a yellow tuck-in sports shirt and poudre blue bolero with blue beanie and brown skirt. Although that combination would not be overly striking in cloth it is practically sensational in the soft leather. It is the same principal as we use in dressing technicolor pictures. Since we do not know exactly how the director will place the actors on the set we must have all colors in agreement. We do this by dipping them all in a final eru dye. In that way all the colors gain a slight sepia tone and are never harsh against each other. The degraded leathers, in some curious way, also retain a soft similar tone.

Ann Sheridan's Titian coloring is beautifully emphasized by a manish shirt of violet with a suit of Robin Hood green leather. The jacket, fitted and made with action back is in the new two-thirds length while the violet hat is made with high peaked crown and dipped brim.

We have not used a lot of this new material for picture purposes as yet in spite of the interest the stars have exhibited in it personally. However Milo Anderson did one very smart cocktail costume of it which Heather Thatcher wears in Mervyn LeRoy's "Fools For Scandal." It consists of waistcoat, Cavalier gloves and envelope bag rose and hip-length swing jacket as well as Cavalier hat of stone blue leather. The square-shouldered jacket fastens with one button at the throat and then is cut away to show the contrasting waistcoat. In this case Milo combines the new material with a black hard wool knife-pleated skirt. The leather, incidentally, photographs very much like lustreless velvet or divety.

HOLLYWOOD—(INS)—The Parisian doorman who said he never had to look beyond the feet to recognize a really chic woman would have to pay particular attention to the heels this year if he were stationed at the entrance to a Hollywood night club. Heels which have never gone too gay before are really the shoeman's day.

Light this spring. The upper part of the shoe won't be vastly different from last year's style although a bit more of the toes will show and more sports as well as evening shoes will have only a band over the heel. That banded look is becoming even more popular.

For dress occasions the medium French heel will continue to charm. However it's no longer unostentatiously covered with the same material as the shoe. Instead it contrasts or glitters or sparkles while it is cleverly tied up with some other section of the ensemble.

The recent discovery of a guaranteed unbreakable glass will doubtless result in the popularity of glass heels similar to those Gloria Dickson wears in Warner Bros. "Gold Diggers in Paris." Her's give the final elegant touch to gold kid sandals and are noteworthy because they catch the light like a prism.

This new glass opens endless possibilities, such as cut-glass heels to match one's table glassware and of hollow glass heels which can contain one's favorite flower, good luck piece or boy friend's picture—which, if you will pardon us, is one simple way of making a heel of him. Incidentally this glass can also be tinted various colors so it will not be difficult to find a heel to match one's slipper or frock.

The French star, Annabella, likes cloisonne heels on black moire taffeta slippers which she wears with a black gown of self-material. Huge cloisonne clips which accent the square neckline of the dress are done in the same colors and pattern as the heels.

NEW COLLECTION IDEA

GREENWOOD, Mass.—(INS)—So far as Ray Hunsom can find out, only two other private collectors in the world—one in California, the other in Holland—are engaged in his pleasant pastime of collecting automobile number plates from different states.

Judge James Aims To Check Flight of Industry

imposed and many laws "regulating" industry passed. Appealing for a restoration of the "Republican principle of encouraging business instead of throttling it," he added:

Once we succeed in reawakening industry in this State, in halting the flight of our factories, then we shall have better jobs for those now at work and new jobs would be found for every idle man who wants a job.

That manufacturing and farming are interdependent and before the farmer can prosper the mills and factories must be able to operate without being hampered by overburdening taxation and restrictive legislation was emphasized by the Republican aspirant.

Ample evidence to support the charges of Judge James has for months been furnished by the business interests of Pennsylvania. The textile industry is being forced to migrate by the ruinous taxation imposed on business in this State. Other industries have felt the cruel pressure. Protests have come from every corner of the Commonwealth.

A comparison of Pennsylvania's corporate taxes payable in 1937 and 1934, made for the State Chamber of Commerce, could be studied to advantage by the Dent Commission when it comes here next week. The corporations used for purposes of the study would have paid an aggregate of $176,248.50 under Republican rule in 1934 and $798,396,000 in 1937 under Democratic rule, an increase of $622,147.50 imposed by the New Deal Administration.

In the face of the facts Governor Earle's assertion that taxes are not responsible for migration of industry seems less than feeble. There is no doubt that industry is leaving Pennsylvania. New businesses shun this State. Unemployment is increasing. Wages are declining. Judge James is fighting to stop this condition and restore the Republican principle of helping and encouraging industry.

ON SCREENS IN BRISTOL

BRISTOL

Without the obvious mystery tricks that are constantly being used in motion pictures, "The Thirteenth Man," which opens today at the Bristol Theatre proves to be a first rate Monogram production with suspense, thrills and plenty of action.

The breezy story contains all the essentials for an excellent mystery drama. It concerns the mysterious killing of a crusading district attorney and the solution of the crime by an ace radio news commentator.

Weldon Heyburn portrays the role of the reporter with force and reality. Inez Courtney plays the feminine lead and is both convincing and attractive.

As the romantic leads in "Romance in the Dark," which patrons of the Bristol Theatre will see beginning tomorrow, Gladys Swarthout and John Boles prove that people may sing like gods and still behave very much like human beings when it comes to an affair of the heart.

In this story of romance and intrigue in gay Budapest, in which John Barrymore, fresh from his role in "True Confession," furnishes the chief comic interest, Boles is seen as the spoiled favorite of the Hungarian theatre, who turns his housemaid, Miss Swarthout, into a Persian princess, in order to play a trick on his best friend. When his friend falls for the trick so completely that he turns the bogus princess into a star, Boles begins a mad pursuit to win his love back again.

The sophisticated comedy of "Romance in the Dark" is carefully blended with music to please lovers of both classical and popular pieces. In addition to world-famous selections from "Carmen," "Barber of Seville" and "Song of India," three new popular songs are heard for the first time in the Paramount picture. They are "Tonight We Love," by Ralph Rainger and Leo Robin, "Blue Dawn," by Phil Bontelle and Ned Washington, and "Bewitched by the Night," by Jay Gorney.

The cast of well-known players, directed by H. C. Potter, includes blonde Claire Dodd, Fritz Feld, the comic hotelkeeper of "I Met Him in Paris," Curt Boris and Carlos de Valdez. "Romance in the Dark" is a Harlan Thompson production.

GRAND

A brilliant group of writers collaborated on the screen version of "The Baroness and the Butler," opening tomorrow at the Grand Theatre. The film co-stars William Powell and Annabella, Europe's chic, charming cinema sensation in the latter's American debut.

For this 20th Century-Fox "Special" by Darryl F. Zanuck, the writing assignment went to Sam Hellman, Lamar Trotti and Kathryn Scola. Hellman is well remembered for his uproariously funny Saturday Evening Post stories, while Trotti has risen to the ranks of top-flight screen penmen by the thunderous success of "In Old Chicago."

Walter Lang directed the film, with Raymond Griffith associate producer.

A football picture with a new angle. That, in a few words, is the idea behind "Saturday's Heroes," RKO Radio's stirring drama of college athletes at the Grand Theatre tomorrow.

The angle, which is tackled with the same hard-fisted vigor that an All-American linesman uses in taking a rival quarterback out of play, is professionalism in college sport. Movie-makers have generally ignored the subject, just as if no one doubted that the majority of varsity teams were simply pure amateurs.

But the picture doesn't stop after it points out the evil. It goes further. It suggests a cure, which to many will seem like a logical way out of the situation. The film comes right out and claims that players should receive salaries and admit frankly that they are professionals, instead of evading the question by accepting free scholarships, dish-washing jobs—or sinecures, in the instances of star performers.

In the Senators' Scramble

By BURNLEY

Bucky Harris, genial as ever, has his work cut out trying to build the Senators into first division material.

The Washington leader has a weird assortment of aging veterans and promising youngsters on his roster. As a result, the Senators' 1938 prospects are studied with very large IFS. If Buddy Myer returns to his 1936 batting form, if Al Simmons can blast some of his past brilliance, if Ben Chapman retains his speed and dash; if the youngsters Buddy Lewis and Cecil Travis continue to improve; if the pitching holds up—that's the way the Senators' supporters must talk when weighing Washington's chances.

These doubtful probabilities and contingencies confront Harris as he faces what is a crucial managerial season for him.

Unless Bucky betters the team's 1937 showing, it seems more than likely that the implacable Clark Griffith will get a new leader for the Nats. The Silver Fox of the American League can't be content with a loser for long, and his managers must deliver—or else. All of which means that Mister Harris is in a really tough spot.

Washington Snapshots

By JAMES PRESTON

A careful bit of behind-the-scenes strategy has come to light in connection with the increasing talk of an early adjournment of Congress. And if the strategists do their work effectively, the wage-hour bill hopes of the administration may not—as had been expected—expire in a Congressional pigeon hole.

Instead, the stage is being set for a "pressure" passage of such a bill in an eleventh hour fight.

The strategy began when it recently became apparent that most all members of Congress are anxious to get back home as early as possible—what with most of them facing hard campaigns before next November's "reckoning" at the polls.

Briefly, the strategists are advancing along this line:

1. Let Congress proceed with the plan to clear the slate of all current measures in the belief adjournment can then be effected.

2. Limit additional presidential messages and requests to recommendations for studies of problems for which legislations will be sought next year.

3. When the slate in both Houses is clean of all other matters and adjournment is near, rush a wage-hour bill into the House floor and throw all hands to drive it through.

The plan is to have the wage-hour measure so "innocently" drafted that the House won't hesitate to pass it. Then a conference committee would be appointed, and given only a brief time to reconcile the "innocent" House bill and the more drastic wage bill passed a year ago by the Senate.

The result would be—and this is the final catch—that the conference committee would almost certainly reconcile the bills to conform with the original wage-hour regulations proposed by the administration.

Just to be sure that Farmer Jones lives up to the many rules prescribed by the government for the operation of his farm, the Agricultural Adjustment Administration is going to do a little "aerial policing."

The AAA has contracted with an aerial survey firm to photograph 108,554 square miles of farm lands as a start toward checking the performance of its conservation program.

After reading an announcement that a special government committee has been appointed to find out what is wrong with and what can be done to revive the waning $25,000,000,000 railroad industry, one of the Capital side-line spectators dryly observed:

"It's refreshing to hear that we've come around to realize an abused goose won't lay golden eggs but it's astounding that it's going to take a special committee of experts to decide it officially."

Undaunted by criticism of its earlier movie production, "The Plow That Broke the Plains," the government has released another $50,000 cinema—"The River." This one is destined to show us that a lot of tax dollars are being spent for the "upkeep" of old man river. As if we taxpayers hadn't known it all the time!

Herbison Culbertson and daughter Claire, Philadelphia, were Thursday callers of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Culbertson and Mrs. Marge Culbertson. On Sunday Mrs. Culbertson, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Culbertson spent the day in Browns Mills, N. J., visiting Mr. and Mrs. Fred Weller.

Harry McLaughlin, Sr., is confined to his home by illness. Mr. and Mrs. William Grace entertained Mr. and Mrs. Kenney, Fox Chase over the week-end.

The Tuesday evening card club met at the home of Mrs. William Herring Pinoche was played. Mrs. Anthony Bonkowski winning first prize. Mrs. Elmer Pressell, consolation.

The Cornwells Fire Co. No. 1 will hold a meeting in the fire house on Thursday evening.

Mrs. Lee Sedgewick entertained on Wednesday afternoon. Mrs. Benjamin Miehle, Bridesburg; Mrs. William Miehle, Mrs. Charles Miehle, Miss Christine Miehle, Mrs. Thomas Harrison and Miss Hazel Peak.

Miss Hazel Peak was guest of Miss Mary Griffin, Philadelphia, Friday.

Behind the Scenes in HOLLYWOOD

HOLLYWOOD—Don't know whether you follow the westerns but the war between Gene Autry and Republic continues to be the biggest thing in the realm of horse operas.

An amusing angle is that Autry, in spite of the hostilities, will get his name on the picture being made by his successor, Roy Rogers. Not as an actor but as the author of the song, "Dust".

Autry wrote the number with Johnny Marvin and, of course, expected to sing it. Now, Rogers does the warbling, but Autry crashes the credit sheet as co-author.

Are Stan Laurel and Oliver Hardy fighting over the script for their personal appearance tour because of the big part Laurel wanted to give Hiliana? So the story goes, anyway. The odd part of it is, George Jessel also would like to sign Hiliana for his personal appearance act.

The proprietor of the barber shop where Arleen Whelan worked before she went into the movies is being driven nuts by applicants for manicurist jobs. They all hope some of the Hollywood patrons will discover them, too.

For the sake of the record, the starlet pronounces her last name "Wheelan".

I promised not to tell the New Yorker who is making all those calls to Wendy Barrie, but the conversations probably will make front page news around 1941.

On the R-K-O lot I ran into Fred Astaire several times mentioned as one of the 10 best-dressed men in Hollywood. He was wearing brown suede shoes with a couple of jagged tears in the toes. "My lucky shoes," he explained. Fred doesn't think this best-dressed man business is even funny.

"It makes you feel like a stuffed duck," he complained to me. Newcomers never cease to wonder at the informality of Hollywood. At the Beverly Derby the other night, some smartly dressed easterners were sitting in the next building. Great "egg factories" have been established near the cities. Twenty-three thousand layers are working their thirteen-hour shifts in three factory buildings in Chicago's Loop area and hotels are experimenting with roof poultry plants, where chicks carry new-laid eggs and freshly killed broilers direct to the kitchen. A rustless-water trough runs the whole length of each tier of cells, so that the entire row of hens may be watered at once. The hen's diet is regulated and her day is set by artificial light, the favored length being 13 hours. So many operations have been simplified that one man can care for 1,999 hens.

Before each cell is a printed card with a square for each day in the month, upon which the hen's production record is kept. The owner determines the number of eggs each hen must produce monthly, basing his estimate on the cost of feed, the selling price of eggs and the overhead. Lag-gards in production are culled out each month and appear somewhere shortly as dressed fowl. Thus have hens been forced into the modern competitive system.

All the Hollywood chorines who used to work with Maxine Nash are banding together to send flowers to her funeral and those who are not working will be there in person. Maxine, not yet 20, died in Florida where she had gone to work in a night club in the hope that some Broadway producer would see her. Once on Broadway, she dreamed of making a hit and, some day, of returning to Hollywood in triumph.

Instead, she returns in death. Her pallbearers will be the chorus boys and other workers she knew on the sets.

Clark Gable, who plays a news-reel cameraman in his next M. G. M. picture, "Too Hot to Handle", fell down completely on his Mexican assignment. He took along a camera to photograph the capture of a mountain lion. But the lions wouldn't appear, not even for Gable. So the star returned without shooting a foot of film.

Luise Rainer's father is safe in Brussels. . . . Now it is Alexander D'Arcy who is taking Jane Stanton, the tennis star, around. They were at Maxie Rosenbloom's. . . . Nice gesture by Gene Raymond. The daughter of Cameraman Norbert Brodine has been desperately ill in the hospital. She is an ardent Raymond fan. So, when they were ready to take her home, Gene went to the hospital, carried her to the car and, again, from the car to her room at home. . . . The James Ellisons (Gertrude Dunkin) are sailing for Honolulu. They'll be guests of Duke Kahanamoku.

It's a girl at the Swanton Daltons (Jeanette Meenan). . . . Don Ameche is still
